THE "TREATY PORTS OF CHINA & JAPAN," AND "NOTES AND QUERIES ON CHINA AND JAPAN.

EXTRACTS FROM REVIEWS. (From the "Friend of India," June 4, 1868.) We acknowledge with thanks the receipt of the numbers for the current year of Notes and Queries," a most deserving Anglo-Chinese monthly, edited by Mr N. B. Dennys, whose "Treaty Ports of Chine and Japan" are so well known. From the names attached to the "Notes" we can see that the contributors include some of the best Chinese scholars in the East. Its interest is not confined to China, and it will be of valuable assistance to all scholars, who have directed their attention towards the subject of Buddhism and its literature, and generally to all who are interested in oriental antiquities. It deserves to be better known in India.

(From the "Straits Times," July 27, 1868. Some time ago we had occasion to remark upon the progress that Literature as represented by the Press had made and was making in the East, and our attention has again been called to the subject by the receipt of a Hongkong publication which deserves some notice and which we have much pleasure in introducing to the knowledge of our readers. We allude to Notes and Queries on China and Japan, published monthly by Mr Saint, the proprietor of the China Mail newspaper. This publication is well printed on good paper, and in size and shape is very like its well-known namesake or prototype at home, and is equally a mine containing very curious and useful information regarding the language, literature, history, manners and customs of the Chinese and in a less degree of the Japanese. It says a good deal for the extent and stability of the footing of Europeans in China, that such a publication as this should be established and conducted with apparently successful vigour. The publication is altogether a very interesting one, and wishing it every success, we commend it to the attention and support of our readers. " (From the "London Examiner," May

This really useful volume ["Treaty Ports | of China and Japan"] is intended as a guide for travellers and residents in China and Japan, and as a book of reference for mercantile men generally. It contains an account, historical, and political, of all the open ports of these countries, together with Peking, Yedo, Hongkong, and Macao. It has been carefully compiled and edited by Mr N. B. Denuys: and the elaborate maps and plans, with which the work abounds, the more prominent portions of the chapter of Mails once a Month between Caylon and devoted to Canton, as a specimen of the Mauritius, and between Mauritius and whole volume. Other chapters treating of Macao, Formosa, Ningpo, Shanghao, and the remainder of the treaty ports, we can only enumerate. The pages describing Peking, the capital, are so interesting, and contain so much that is new to European readers respecting its history, public buildings, and general characteristics, that we would fain transfer them to our columns. A complete and intelligible plan of the Imperial City and neighbourhood, gives us an accurate notion of the relative position of its divisions, streets, and places. In the introductory chapter to the notices of the Treaty Ports of Japan will be found a succinct history of that Empire, together with remarks on its government, geography, and limits, which will be found particularly interesting as throwing a considerable light on a part of the world so long entirely, and When sent' by way of still comparatively, unknown to Europeans.

The descriptions of Nagasaki, Yedo, Yokohama, and the other Treaty Ports of Japan, are as elaborate and entertaining as those of the Chinese ports. A copious index and a useful appendix containing many hints and much appropriate advice to tra- Book Packets via Southvellers and others, is also included in the volume. The entire work affords a vast amount of information, pleasantly written, and we doubt not will be perused with interest by many who will nover visit the Eastern seas.

It was carried out at Whampoa but very recently, and that fact assures us that our interests in the South are in good hands. We wish the same could be said of every open port in China.

WERE we not acquainted with the proverbial unreliability of the political news furnished by the New York Herald, we should be considerably astonished at the statement which appeared in itashorttime since to the effect that the French Minister at Washington had expressed a belief that France would cordially receive the Burlingame embassy. He is said to have expressed an opinion that Russia and Prussia would not be the only countries which would receive the mission with a hearty welcome. The Herald does not merely express a rumour but professes to give M. Berthemy's words verbatim. "In conversation," he is stated to have said that "he knew no reason why the French government should not make a treaty with China quite as liberal as that effected recently with the United States.' He added "that he believed the Embassy would be respectfully received by all the European governments." This is in startling contradiction to the sentiments which French Diplomatists are known to have hitherto expressed and enter-Does it foreshadow a change in the opinion of the Emperor or is it merely the apparently careless utterance of a finished diplomatist far too wary to commit himself to aught but unmeaning compliments, and who merely while in Rome does as the Romans do?

LANDSTEIN v. CARLOWITZ AND OTHERS. On the motion to make absolute the rul nisi for a new trial, in this case. Mr Pollard Q.C., (instructed by Mr Caldwell) appeared to show cause against. Mr Hayllar, instructed by Mr Hazeland, appeared for defendants. Mr Hayllar, before going on with the case, remarked that at the last hearing of the case he had used one expression regarding a gentleman which rather went beyond the exigencies of the case; and as he understood that the expression had caused deep distress of mind to that gentleman. he asked leave to withdraw it. although it was used, and was meant only to be used. in connection with the issue of the case. masts and funnel still standing, but the It was a private matter, but he made this explanation in as public a manner as he had formerly made the assertion. Still: although he thus modified his language. he could not admit that the evidence as givon by Mr Moss was correct.

His Lordship said that, of course, when he withdrew the expression, the words were then as if they had never been used; but the withdrawal as counsel could never be expected to affect his case.

Mr Hayllar repeated, that the charge against Mr Moss was withdrawn, and said bored under the imputation for so many

Mr Pollard said he was sure that noth ing could be more satisfactory than what had been said by his learned friend. The (on the first ground) that such could not be the case because there was only one witvery clear as to that evidence being insuffi cient to justify a verdict (uncontradicted as it then was), it would be against the practice to grant a new trial; -as a case cited laid it down, there must not only be some doubt, but the Judge was bound to see that there was good valid ground before send-Chun Asoo, a widow, complained against ing back a case for trial on the matter of side or other, was no misdirection whatconclusion" that a new trial was granted on the ground of misdirection. The intention tion of the case; and as to intention, and (according to the right conceded of rejection if damaged) should have been granted, were questions properly left for decision by the Jury. And they had been so left to the Jury by His Lordship. In view of the special clause entitling plaintiffs to reject the goods in case of damage, His Lordship had put it to the Jury whether or not the first inspection was final or not:-whether it was simply a preliminary inspection to asther it was a real inspection as directly between yender and vendee. Thus the question had been left open to the Jury. His Lordship remarked that as to the wording of the summing up, he did not suppose that counsel agreed in one single point; but he could not belo thinking that Mr Pollard's version of his words was nearer his usual mode of speaking than that of Mr Havllar's notes. Mr Pollard then proceeded to remark upon other grounds on which it was asked to make the rule absolute. The fact of defendants having discovered new evidence did not entitle them to a new trial: ought to have been brought forward at the first trial; and defendants would have now to prove surprise. Whereas, as Mr P contended, the present case was based upon the question of whether Mr Moss's opinion was mistaken or not. It was clearly shown in the pleas what the case for plaintiff was to be; and unless the defendants could clearly show that they liad been taken by surprise, and that they could not have then had the evidence

Mr Hayllar next spoke in support of the to the parties themselves and to the author motion. In the matter of the verdict being rities of both countries; and whereas it is against the weight of evidence, contrary to desirable, with a view to the maintenance evidence and perverse, he remarked that of order and good Government of British the only matter in evidence by the plaintiff Subjects of Chinese descent resorting to at the trial was touching the custom and

The contract was certainly complete, because, had defendants attempted to detain the goods, in case of the market rising, they would have been guitly of a complete tort. Mr Pollard objected, because the Chief Justice had already decided that there was no constructive delivery. Chief Justice: Where have I said that there was no constructive delivery? Mr Pollard read from Mr Breraton's shorthand notes. The Chief Justice replied that he had said there was no constructive acceptance or delivery which would be valid in law, though a paper had passed between the parties; but he had left the point to the Jury. Mr Hayllar repeated that plaintiffs had constructive possession of the goods, the defendants merely holding them to the plaintiff's order. What was the fact? why, the plaintiff took the delivery order and sent the cheque for the money by re-

Mr Pollard: Yes, upon good faith. Mr Hayllar continued. Upon the good faith of what ?-why simply upon the good faith of a custom, which had never yet been proved. There had been no evidence whatever produced except that as to custom. Was there anything which slidwed that the contract was not thoroughly completed? He said most certainly that there was not and that it was the strongest case which had ever come before a Jury. The only doubt which could possibly rest upon the transaction was as to the intention to reopen the contract; and this he maintained was a misdirection, because it had nothing whatever to do with the original contract. Would so good a business man as Mr Landstein be likely, if he intended to reopen the question, send the cheque for the value of the twenty-four bales declared sound by the first inspection? The learned counsel referred to the question of alleged "custom" and read Mr. Duncanson's evidence, followed by His Lordship, who, in roply to Mr Hayllar, observed "This is a case by itself." Mr Hayllar: Precisely so, my Lord, and therefore it does not illustrate a "custom. upon which the plaintiffs relieft. With reference to the argument that the contract had been varied by addition through custom the learned counsel romarked that before a term could be so added to a contract. the custom must be made out definitely; but it was clear that no such custom as was alleged had been at all made out. Then as to the question whether the defendants did | Queen of Spain an asylum. not in law consent to an addition to the tion, he contended that the original con- being made King of Spain, tract had been completely executed before the inspection occurred, so that there was no contract to be added to. Then as to the inspection by an "expert." It did not seemto him that this case came within the scope of an expert's experience. If two persons said that additional expenditure on the looked on a piece of paper, and one said there were spots upon it while the other said there were none, that became a dispute on a matter of fact, not requiring for its decision the expert knowledge that. would be requisite to tell the market value defendants not calling evidence as to the condition of the bales, at the late trial, the explanation was that the goods having already, been inspected, they carefully avoided the second inspection by plaintiffs, lest they might have been hold to concur

His Lordship said he would take time to consider. Locking at the affidavit now filed there certainly would appear some reason to believe that Mr Moss was mistaken. Persons who had examined the bales after Mr Moss, had arrived at a different opinion as to their condition. Imbued as his mind was with the principles which guided Courts of equity, he was naturally anxious as a Judge that justice should be done; but he

SHELLEY STREET. To the Editor of the "CHINA MAIL," Sir. —I think that, before the street im provements now going on are brought to an end, Shelley street should receive some attention. It is a much-frequented avenue of communication between the upper and lower parts of the central portion of the city, and its use has increased since the opening of the Club Lusitano. But its surface is so rough with loose stones as to make it absolutely dangerous. I have seen several accidents occur to men and women not only through their chair coolies falling, but when doing some independent pedestrianism: and I witnessed another this morning when an eminent and esteemed gentleman high in official position. spilt through his leading coolie tripping on a loose stone. I should not like to see the hard surface of the road broken up; but removal or breaking up of the miniature rocks that are there, and the binding together of the smaller fragments, would assuredly diminish present daugers very materially. I hope my hint will be taken and acted on, for it is not without founda-
